Lindex sent the following response:

"Thank you very much for drawing our attention to this event. We were already aware of what had happened through our local office in Myanmar, who investigated the matter. They found that it was a gathering of workers who protested against poor working conditions regarding among other issues, water and sanitation. The problem was resolved quickly and as far as I know to everyone's satisfaction. We regret what has happened and will have a close dialogue with the factory to monitor the situation from now on."
