Modern slavery statement

1. Introduction

Modern slavery happens across the world. As well as being a punishable crime, forcing people to work and exploiting their human rights for personal or commercial gain is a moral atrocity which has no place in the world of business.

In line with this view, we operate a zero-tolerance policy to modern slavery in our Group of companies. As well as being transparent in our operations, we also have the right policies and practises in place to ensure our business operates in a way which leaves no room for modern slavery.

This statement is pursuant to section 54 (1) of the modern slavery act 2015, and applies to the The Foremost Currency Group Financial Year ending 30 June 2019.

2. Organisation structure

This statement applies to The Foremost Currency Group which operates in the UK.

3. Policies & training

We implement a suite of policies, guidelines and training initiatives in our organisation which help to ensure we uphold our stance on modern slavery. These include our Anti Money Laundering and Client Acceptance policies, alongside specific guidelines set out in our Employee Handbook and Whistleblowing manual.

4. Due diligence & risk management

We undertake a high level of scrutiny when recruiting staff in our offices. All new members of staff undergo eligibility and criminal checks, ensuring that adequate local laws are adhered to with regards employment and minimum wage requirements.

In addition we have a robust risk-management process in place at The Foremost Currency Group which provides easily available channels for reporting any incidents surrounding modern slavery, with board-level review.
