Related policies

- Trades Union Recognition Agreement

Risk

The Elliot Foundation Academies whilst unaware of all of the employment terms of conditions of its supply chain is low risk for enabling modern slavery

- 81% of the organisation's turnover is spent on its own staff who are employed according to national standard terms and conditions set out in the blue and burgundy books
- The Trust is committed to paying the living wage and London living wage
- Trustees have also committed the Trust to achieving Living Wage Employer status which places a further obligation on ensuring that our supply chain pays the living wage
- The Trust works with all teaching and support staff unions through a National Joint Committee
- Our significant contracts are with RM Education, EPM, Browne & Jacobson, all of which were procured through OJEU compliant processes and Modern Slavery commitments were part of the tender process
- Catering contracts and catering supplies which are probably the area with the most significant risk are procured through ESPO or other DfE approved frameworks
