“NSO has also recently shared a new governance framework that brings the company into alignment with the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. We are proud that these governance standards make us the only company in the cyber sector – and one of a small number in any industry – to establish policies and practices that meet the Guiding Principles. In setting a model for good corporate governance in the cyber intelligence industry, NSO has codified our commitment to ethical business by building respect for human rights into all aspects of our work.”
